Scottish Indexes Conference XI

11 July 2021

Firstly, a huge thank you to everyone who took part in our conference on Saturday. Once again, we had a great attendance and some great tips were shared for tracing our Scottish ancestors.

I can't wait to hear more about your research in the coming weeks. It's great to hear that many have already made new discoveries after putting the tips into practice.

Our next conference will be on Saturday 4 September 2021 and registration is now open. Margaret Fox, formerly an archivist at the National Records of Scotland, will take an in-depth look at kirk sessions and cases that worked their way up to the Synod. Genealogist Michelle Leonard will help us get to grips with DNA Painter. Myko Clelland will join us from Findmypast and Tessa Spencer will join us from the National Records of Scotland. I hope you can join us.

Emma Maxwell is a genealogist of 20 years experience. Emma and her husband and fellow-genealogist Graham find it hard to resist a genealogy brick wall. Over the years Emma has learnt the tricks of the trade to wheedle out those elusive ancestors and discover their stories.

Emma showed us three case studies. The first was one where we knew that a person was born in Scotland but not where. Another case showed us how tracing other members of the same household in a census can help us join the dots. In the third case, Emma looked at what to do when you are researching a common name.

Use the records you have already found and take note of all the information you can. Find out more about the family you have already discovered. Look into the lives of siblings and 'relatives' searching for clues. Broaden your searches and don't forget wildcards. Here is a link to a video where Emma explains how to use wildcards.

Find out more about the location where your family lived. The maps on the National Library of Scotland are free and can show you the area in great detail. Their online guide will help you get started.

The GlasgowFamilyHistory website has many free guides to help you understand the records the Glasgow City Archives hold:

<https://www.glasgowfamilyhistory.org.uk/ExploreRecords/Pages/Explore-Our-Records.aspx>

In person, you can access not only the Glasgow City Archives but also the ScotlandsPeople Hub which gives you the same access to records as you would have in Edinburgh at the ScotlandsPeople Centre. The NHS Greater Glasgow and Clyde Archives is also accessed at the Mitchell Library. If you have Glaswegian ancestors it's certainly a one-stop-shop.

The big news is that the index to the Poor Law records is coming online and that will revolutionise research for us all.

While we wait for this major release, there are some smaller collections we can search online such as the 'Police Return of Destitute', 'Belgian Refugees', 'Chimney Sweeps Licenses for the Burgh of Glasgow, 1852-1862.', 'Militia Records for Glasgow 1810-1831' and 'Evening Times Roll of Honour'. Emma Jolly MA has been working as a professional genealogist since 2006. She holds two history degrees and the IHGS Higher Certificate. A member of AGRA, she has written five books. Her Jolly family descends from Scotland. On her other surname branches, she has English, Welsh, and Ashkenazi Jewish ancestry.

Emma's research made use of a number of websites. These helped her to find out more about the people buried at Seafield Cemetery.

A very useful free website which Emma highlighted was the Commonwealth War Graves website: www.cwgc.org.

Emma also featured newspapers in her presentation. They are a great source of information and with more being added to digital collections all the time, they are an integral part of our family history research.

The British Newspaper Archive is a valuable resource but you may have access to this through your Findmypast subscription. The Google News Archive is a great free resource.

Tracing Scottish Women

by Kirsty Wilkinson

Twitter: @GenealogyGirl

Kirsty F. Wilkinson has worked as a professional genealogist since 2006 and holds an MSc in Genealogical, Palaeographical and Heraldic Studies from the University of Strathclyde. After successfully running her own family history research business for over ten years, Kirsty joined AncestryProGenealogists, the research division of Ancestry.com, in 2017 where she continues to specialise in Scottish research. Kirsty's first book, 'Finding Your Scottish Ancestors: Techniques for Solving Genealogy Problems' was published by Robert Hale in 2020.

Kirsty's book is available from Amazon as a hard copy and the Kindle Edition. It is also available from the publisher, The Crowood Press.

Traditionally, genealogies followed the male surname line with little attention paid to female ancestors. Although that is less so with family history today, the fact that women typically generated fewer records than men means they can often be more difficult to research. This presentation looked at some of the challenges of tracing women in Scotland, as well as highlighting some of the records that can shed light on their lives and bring their individual stories to life.

Kirsty showed us sources for information relating directly and indirectly to our ancestors. For example the book 'Sair, Sair Wark: Women and Mining in Scotland' by Lillian King will help us understand the work our female ancestors did in connection to mining in Scotland.

Particular record sets, such as poor law records can fill in the missing parts of the story. There is a partial list of online indexes to these records in the Scottish Indexes Learning Zone.

Sharing Shetland Surnames

representing the Shetland Family History Society

Website: www.shetland-fhs.org.uk

Email: secretary@shetland-fhs.org.uk

We were all captivated by not only the genealogy but the prospect of homebaking at the events hosted by the family history society. Over the last few years, the society have been conducting studies into some of Shetland's surnames. Here are the surnames the society have researched so far:

Bolt
Henry
Abernethy
Inkster
Mouat
Arcus
Anderson
Gifford
Pearson
Goudie
Arthur
Arthurson
Robertson

Alan and Susan were also telling us about the VIKING II project. Do you have at least two grandparents from Orkney or Shetland? If so, you may be interested in joining this exciting project. Find out more at <https://www.ed.ac.uk/viking>

Member's Story: Diana Rae

by Jennifer Jolly

It was great to see Jennifer join us as a presenter for this conference. Jennifer is a member of the Scottish Indexes Facebook group and regularly helps people solve genealogy mysteries. Using online resources, Jennifer has been able to trace the life of Diana Rae.

One resource Jennifer uses regularly are the Statistical Accounts of Scotland 1791-1845. These provide an insight into each parish in Scotland, which can help you understand what an area was like when your ancestors lived there. These volumes are available online for free at stataccscot.edina.ac.uk. If this is a new resource to you, there is a helpful introduction too.

Jennifer's links are on her blog: jensjardin.wordpress.com

Jennifer also made excellent use of the Merchant Seamen records on Findmypast. These can be quite confusing at first but it's worth persisting with them. The research guides on The National Archives website are excellent to use in conjunction with the records on Findmypast. For example the guide 'Abbreviations in merchant seamen's records' may be one you'll want to bookmark if you are working with these records.

Researching Scots ancestors before civil registration in 1855 can be challenging! In this presentation we learnt about some of the rich alternative sources you can mine when looking for your earlier forebears, like tax records, directories, newspapers, and more – where to find them, and how to make the most of them.

Alison has been looking for ancestors for over 40 years, and she runs Scottish Ancestral Research: Genealogy Detective service. Alison enjoys sharing what she's learned with others in talks, magazine articles, classes, and her Frugal Family Historian blog where she advocates tracing your family tree without breaking the bank (something we can all get on board with).

Alison has prepared a handout to accompany her presentation which you can access here.

New Releases on Scottish Indexes

www.scottishindexes.com

We were delighted to release an index to Crown Office Sudden and Suspicious Deaths: Deaths 1823-1857. These records are taken from volumes AD9/1-11 and AD12/11,12, which are held by the National Records of Scotland. There are 8,709 entries from across Scotland, and the index is now part of our 'Non-OPR Deaths/Burials Index'.

These records can fill in the gaps in the records before 1855, but they can also add to your family story. To illustrate this we have added two short case studies to our Learning Zone. The first revolves around the death of Margaret Mill or Bett and it demonstrates the extra detail these records can add.

The screenshot shows the 'Scottish Indexes' website header with a navigation menu: Home, Advanced Search, Record Sets, Search Help, Research Services, Learning Zone, Bookshop, About Us, Blog. Below the header is the 'Deaths/Burials Search' section. It features a 'Clear Search Form' link and a search form with the following fields:

- Name: Forename(s) and Surname
- Birth Year: Year +/- []
- Death Year: Year +/- []
- Location: Parish and County
- Father: Forename(s) and Surname
- Mother: Forename(s) and Surname
- Spouse: Forename(s) and Surname

A green 'Search' button is located below the form. Below the search form are two promotional banners. The left banner is titled 'SEARCH BY RECORD SET ON SCOTTISH INDEXES' and lists: Mental Health Records, Sheriff Court Paternity Decrees, Scotland's Criminal Database, Register of Deeds, Register of Sasines, Kelso Dispensary Patient Registers, Census Records, and BMDs. The right banner is titled 'LOVE GENEALOGY? LEARN NEW SKILLS AND TAKE YOUR FAMILY HISTORY FURTHER.' and features an image of an open book.

Our growing collection of indexes cover poor relief records, Kirk session records, Scotland's Criminal Database, the Scottish Paternity Index, Mental Health Records and more. To find out exactly what we've indexed so far visit our coverage pages which will give you a breakdown by year and place.

Scottish Genealogy Q&A

Once again we had two lively Q&A sessions and covered a lot of ground. Here are the links I promised to share with you.

Getting started with DNA:

Michelle Leonard joined us for the Q&A. Michelle combines traditional genealogy with DNA to trace family trees. You can find out more about Michelle's services here.

Starting on 29 September Michelle will be tutoring an 8-week DNA Bootcamp. On the DNA Bootcamp you will have the opportunity to gain a solid understanding of your DNA test results, DNA match lists and of how to use the tools provided by DNA testing companies.

A free version of Michelle's presentation Making the Most of your Autosomal DNA Test is available here on YouTube. Or you can watch some through Legacy Family Tree Webinars: <https://familytreewebinars.com/michelleleonard>

1921 Census:

Chris Paton, Scottish genealogist and author of the Scottish GENES blog, joined for the Q&A. His blog keeps us all up-to-date with what's new in Scottish genealogy and beyond.

Chris mentioned an article he has written for Family Tree magazine, 'Key 20th Century Scottish Resources'. Chris details many of records from the last century which you may have overlooked or not used to their full potential.

Online Catalogues:

The catalogue of the National Records of Scotland (NRS) is essential to bookmark for everyone researching in Scotland. This is a catalogue to their collections and is very comprehensive.

The National Register of Archives for Scotland \(NRAS\) was established by the Scottish Record Office (now the National Records of Scotland) in 1946 to compile a record of papers of historical significance in private hands in Scotland. This can be a great way to work out where estate records are held.

The Scottish Archive Network catalogue will be replaced in the coming years. Although their website is a bit old-fashioned, the information is still very useful. The project aimed to revolutionise access to Scotland's archives by providing a single electronic catalogue to the holdings of more than 50 Scottish archives, many of whom do not have their own online catalogue.

Discovery - Discovery holds more than 32 million descriptions of records held by The National Archives and more than 2,500 archives across the country.

Learning Resources:

We have an ever growing Scottish Indexes Learning Zone. Primarily we focus on records available through our website but it is growing to include other resources.

The National Records of Scotland (NRS) has a large collection of detailed research guides. Here is a link to their A-Z. ScotlandsPeople also have free research guides.

Orkney Family History Society

Orkney Family History Society was formed in 1997 and is run by a committee of volunteers. They have an office (currently closed) adjacent to the archives department in the Orkney Library in Kirkwall. Their volunteers are working from home currently and are happy to assist with any enquiries by email. They have a membership of around 1,700 from all over the world. For an annual subscription (starting at £10) members are given access to a wealth of transcribed records on the society's website www.orkneyfhs.co.uk.

Volunteers have transcribed all census records for Orkney from 1841-1911, most gravestone inscriptions as well as a growing number of birth, marriage and death registrations. These are all indexed and searchable on the website.
